

Ideal environments for humans

So this is actually a very very funny thought, now that we are ever living more and more in digital cyber world, my general thought is funny, rather than trying to like kind of escape all the time we are spending in the cyber world, maybe, the interesting twist path is instead, to do something a little unorthodox, which is like, to ironically even try to spend more time in cyberspace, but also, similarly spending more time in nature?

So for example, my very very curious and funny thought, is it possible to use an apple Vision Pro, while hiking, and or in nature, or at the beach?

I've also been doing something interesting which is experimenting, the general ideas that computers, iPhones iPads devices are not necessarily bad, but, the bigger issue is how when and where we use it.

For example, my first thought is perhaps the best way to use technology ironically is in nature.

So a lot of fake virtual people say oh when you're in nature you should disconnect blah blah blah. But actually, I wonder if it's actually more interesting to be more connected while in nature? And come on guys, I have legit missing an authority to say this I'm a Boy Scout Eagle Scout.

So ideally, if you're some sort of Jack Dorsey tech founder or somebody, the ideal thing is you should be using some sort of like satellite phone, 5G 6G phone, iPhone Pro or iPad Pro, connected to some sort of high speed wireless off the grid device, and if you're gonna do meetings all day or whatever, the ideal is to just do it while hiking around and in nature and natural environments all day.

For example, even one of my best friends who is like a pretty big head, and one the big tech companies, like the right hand man of one of the top tech CEOs, was really interesting is that the last time I visited him and he had a boring silly meeting to attend, we just went on a hike together through the redwoods, and he attended, first with his video off and then afterwards, one of these fake middle managers asked him to turn on his screen, and everyone super got jealous because he was hiking in the woods, and then my friend made a funny excuse saying that his doctor said he had to get his oxygen levels up, that is why he was going hiking. Insanely hilarious. I love my friend.

Anyways, I think one of the most valuable things I've learned in life, tech technology, philosophy sociology and like is, assuming you live in America, essentially it's a free planet, you could essentially do anything you want and you don't have to do anything you don't want. Everything is an option, nothing is mandatory.

And the secret of happiness or freedom which is a higher form of happiness, is essentially structuring your life to only do what you want to do and not do anything you don't want to do.

Also this is where self sovereignty philosophy sociology goes a long way, the general idea is it's a free country, it's a free planet it's a free life. You are not an indentured servant or slave. You have freedom. You are a free man a free person, a free woman whatever.
